FIRST TOWN CHARTER FOR TYNGSBOROUGH. LEARN MORE, WEIGH IN!

Tyngsborough's Government Study Committee is ready to present for review the first town charter. The charter clarifies roles and responsibilities of elected and appointed officials and town employees and provides a more efficient structure for effective policy development, increased overall accountability and improved operational day-to-day management of the town. The next step is for Tyngsborough voters to approve this proposed charter at a special town meeting. Should the voters approve the charter, it will be sent to the state legislature for their approval and becomes effective upon approval.

This has been a long process but we are close to the finish line! Now it is up to you, the voters, to make the final decision about the proposed recommendations. The Committee believes that the structure proposed in the charter will make our town run more smoothly and hope that you agree.

Before coming to the special town meeting to vote, you can familiarize yourself with the "what and why?" of the changes to town government proposed in the charter. You can download the charter from the town website or you can stop by town hall for a copy. The town will be hosting information sessions (dates below). Your questions at that time will be welcomed. If you are not able to attend these important sessions you will be able to watch them on demand on the town website. You can submit your questions before or after the scheduled sessions through the town website or can write them down and place them in a box provided in the library.

Please mark your calendars for this special town meeting and at least one of the information sessions. Your vote is important to the future of our town!

Information sessions:

All high school students may join now to begin their eligibility. The deadline for applying for the scholarship is March 16. Check the website for more information including the application. <http://www.tynglib.org/index.php/friends-of-library>

ESTATE PLANNING ISSUES TO CONSIDER

By Edward H. Adamsky

No one really wants to think about death or disability, but everyone should plan for it whether they like it or not. You don't want to leave a mess for your loved-ones. You need to take the proper steps to plan for yourself and your family.

Some people are very worried about "Probate" without even knowing what it is. Probate is the Court-Supervised process of dealing with the assets of a person who has died. If you leave assets behind in your own name (with no automatic way for them to pass to others such as beneficiary designation) then those assets will have to pass through the Probate process. Having a Will does not avoid Probate (even though people seem to think that is the case).

The Probate process has been modernized and streamlined, so it's not as bad or expensive as you may have heard. In most cases it is fairly quick and easy. Not everyone needs to plan to avoid probate. But, for some the process could get tricky and some people need to have Trusts or other tools to avoid probate or limit its problems.

For those who want or need a Trust it is very important to properly "fund" the trust after it is executed. This means going to your bank and broker and moving accounts into the name of the Trust. If you do not complete this process, then your Trust won't help your family avoid probate.

Even if you have completed your planning, you should review it periodically to make sure it doesn't need to be updated. If there have been changes in your family (births, deaths, divorces) you may need to make changes. You should pay attention to your assets and the tax laws and consult with your attorney if you think any changes might affect you.

Planning for illness or disability is a key part of Estate Planning. You should have a Power of Attorney and a Health Care Directive to allow your chosen Agent to handle your affairs if necessary. You may want to prepare lists of assets and letters of instructions so your family knows what you want. You should also have a discussion with your family regarding your wishes for health care and quality of life. And make your funeral wishes known. That issue can cause family fights or anxiety if there are questions of what you wanted.

You should see your Elder Law/Estate Planning Attorney to discuss your needs and wishes and make sure your plan is put into place, updated as needed, and written down so all of your family knows your wishes.

THE LOADING DOCK GALLERY

122 Western Avenue • Lowell, MA 01851

Show: Interiors, Through April 1, 2018

Dictionary.com defines "interior" as "being within; inside of anything; internal; inner; further toward a center." But where is your personal interior? Your kitchen in the early morning light? The cozy look of your home when you go outdoors to gaze back through the windows after dark? Or, perhaps the emotions and secrets hidden in your private interior?

This March, the artists of the Loading Dock Gallery at Western Avenue Studios in Lowell explore and interpret these themes in Interiors. The show features artwork in a variety of mediums, both traditional and contemporary, by over 20 artists.

Nan Hockenbury's painting "Adolescence" uses symbols of love, sexuality, and physical and emotional changes to express the interior struggles inherent to the journey to adulthood. The flesh tone hues accented with reds and oranges gives an organic, emotional feel to the piece.

"Rosa's Room" depicts the bedroom of octogenarian Rosa Piacenza, a personal friend of photographer Deb Arsenault. The atmosphere in the image evokes an eerie feeling of past moments lost forever. The position of the single bed conveys a coffin-like loneliness coupled with the natural misty light giving the sense of peace, quiet, and tranquility.

The Loading Dock Gallery is a part of Loading Dock Arts, Inc., a 501c3 is open Wednesday-Saturday from Noon to 5:30 PM and Sunday from Noon to 4 PM. For more information, call 978-596-1576 or visit www.theloadingdockgallery.com

BODY INTUITION

The intelligence of the body is millions of years older and far deeper than the rational mind," p.137 Deepak Chopra and Rudolph E. Tanzi The Healing Self

As a psychotherapist, I rely on the body to guide me in my work. What is happening inside the body of my client and inside my body matters a great deal as to where the therapy will go that day.

For me, my body gives me clues about whether or not we are on course. If we are heading down a path that feels "not right," I will sense a tightness in my belly and an uneasiness in my body. However, most of the time, my body is calm and I know we are where we are supposed to be. Strong emotions could be present in that room but I am at complete ease knowing that healing is taking place. My body is open while I sit inside a hole of immense grief with a client, or maybe we are gently scratching beneath the whispers of anxiety or loudly uncovering a firestorm of rage. But my body is tranquil because I know we are delving down into the waters of correct purpose.

For my client, I continually ask them to check in with their bodies as well. The body is repeatedly my "go to" source of information. It is the magical dowser that leads to the water and indicates if we have forged the right path. Clients tell me that they feel emotions and subsequent bodily sensations. We watch if the sensations move, shift, change in sensitivity or course.

This is the bodily intuition that moves us into healing moments. Moment by moment, even the most painfully lodged traumas can be healed. And the body is the trustworthy sherpa motioning us to listen.

And just as brilliant as this body is towards emotional healing, it is equally powerful and luminous with physical healing. The body is constantly talking. Sometimes it is loud and noisy, other times soft and gentle but no doubt this is one talkative and chatty vessel!

However, when it comes to life threatening or chronic illness, people feel like the body is the traitor. This mass of form has failed them. We become angry. We feel besieged. I get that. My body had not only failed me but it attacked me. It was overwhelming at times. But I then started moving into my body in a deeper way. Just like my work, I started to view the body as my guide, my litmus, and my counsel. What was this carnal vessel telling me? What did it want? It turns out that it had a novel within its torrent.

Initially its screams were about how I wasn't listening. This not listening and not hearing became both literal and figurative for me. I wasn't hearing what my body and spirit needed. However, I started to listen. I listened very, very deeply. And through the listening and then the watching, I saw the dance unfold just like my work with clients.

The messages changed, moved, shifted and spoke. The smoke signals started to make sense. Sometimes it was about my lack of attention and care. Sometimes it was about how I was off course.. Sometimes it was about how I needed to delve deeper. Sometimes it was about how I needed to break open to the mysteriousness of Spirit consciousness. And sometimes it was quite literally about what to eat that day, how to move my body, how to move my mind, what supplements or medications to take, and what kind of helper/healer/doctor I needed to see.

The body is the wise crone. She is much older and deeper than the rational mind as the quote says above. She speaks in riddles, metaphors and sensation. She speaks and we must listen. If we don't, she screeches louder until we hear. It is through this dialogue that we honor the wise sage within our flesh and the intuitive messenger who beckons us to live a life more fully present, more fully open and more fully attuned. This is the body intuition.

MIDDLESEX SHERIFF'S OFFICE WARNS OF CONTINUING IRS AND JURY DUTY SCAM CALLS Sheriff Koutoujian among those targeted by scammers

Middlesex Sheriff Peter J. Koutoujian today issued a reminder to residents to be aware of ongoing IRS and jury duty scams.

"We are issuing this reminder because we have seen an uptick in calls being reported to our office over the past several days. We want residents to be aware of these scams in order to better protect themselves," said Sheriff Koutoujian. "Recently, both my mother and I, personally received IRS scam calls and though we each recognized they were not legitimate and immediately hung up – not all do because many of these perpetrators can be extremely convincing."

In addition to the IRS scam calls, the MSO has received calls from local residents reporting they have been contacted and threatened with a warrant for their arrest for failing to perform jury duty. The callers tell the victims, they can avoid arrest if they immediately pay a fine or fee. In one case a resident reported losing approximately $1,000 to the scammers.

In all of the cases, the perpetrators – either via automated message or live human being – have threatened arrest. In some, they have indicated individuals are being monitored in some form or fashion (IRS scam call voicemail).

"At no time will a legitimate IRS agent or law enforcement official ever demand immediate payment or threaten arrest over the phone," said Sheriff Koutoujian. "These are telltale signs of a scam and we want residents to be alert to them so they can properly protect themselves."

Anyone who may have received similar calls is encouraged to report them to their local police department and the MSO Digital Forensics Unit at 978-932-3292. Individuals with questions regarding jury duty can contact the Office of Jury Commissioner at 1-800-843-5879.

Individuals or businesses receiving IRS scam calls may also report them to Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration (TIGTA) through its IRS Impersonation Scam Reporting web page. All financial losses should also be immediately reported to your local police department.

NASHUA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

The program New England Lighthouses and the People Who Kept Them will be presented at The Nashua Historical Society on Tuesday, March 20, 2018 at 7:30 p.m. Everyone knows there's "something about lighthouses" that gives them broad appeal, but their vital role in our history and culture is little appreciated. Our early nation was built on maritime economy, and lighthouses were part of the system that made that possible. Due to automation, traditional lighthouse keeping is a way of life that has faded into the past. Jeremy D'Entremont tells the history of New England's historic and picturesque lighthouses primarily focusing on the colorful and dramatic stories of lighthouse keepers and their families.

This program is free and open to the public through a grant from the NH Humanities, Humanities to Go! The Nashua Historical Society is located at 5 Abbot Street, Nashua. For more information, please call 603-883-0015 or visit our website <http://nashuahistoricalcalsociety.org/>

On January 27, 2018, the Altrusa Club of Merrimack Valley hosted a dinner to celebrate 42 years of service in the Merrimack Valley. Altrusa is dedicated to developing leaders, encouraging volunteers, and organizing community projects to help the less fortunate.

Members of the Altrusa Club were joined by Scott Slattery, Director of Residential Services for Harbor Homes, Inc in Nashua, NH, which services homeless veterans and their families. Slattery spoke about Harbor Homes, Veterans First Program, which serves and supports homeless and low income veterans and their families, with emergency, transitional and permanent housing, employment services, case management, health, dental, and financial assistance.

In addition to our support of Harbor Homes, Altrusans have continued their monthly visits with our military veterans at the Veterans Community Care Center in Lowell. Over the past three years, we have been very grateful to Cynthia Yeager, RN, who has coordinated our visits and helped make this project successful. We wish Ms. Yeager many happy years in her retirement. Thank you for your assistance.

PET HEALTH DUNSTABLE ANIMAL CLINIC PET GRIEF by Tara M. Sacramone, DVM

Losing a pet is one of the most difficult things to go through. It is hard on everyone in the family, even sometimes other pets. Not every pet grieves for another pet, and signs of grief can vary dramatically. Sometimes the remaining pet(s) don't miss a beat. This happened to me when I lost my dog, Gwen. I had thought my other dog, Achilles, loved her so much, but when she died he acted as if he had always been an only pet. I was actually mad at him because I missed her so much, but in the end it was better for him that way, so I moved on. Other pets will look for the missing pet, become withdrawn, stop eating, or start exhibiting bad behaviors such as urinating and defecating inappropriately.

There are a few things you can do to help a grieving pet. One of the hardest things to do is to ignore their bad grieving behavior. If you try to console them, pets confuse our concerned talking and extra petting as positive reinforcement for bad behaviors. Instead try to redirect them to a new behavior. Teach them a new trick, go to an obedience or agility class. Another way to help your remaining pet(s) is to keep them busy, buy a new toy, and/or go on more walks. It's harder to be sad when you are busy.

Some people advocate getting a new pet right away. No pet can ever be replaced, and you never know how the remaining pet(s) will react to a new one. The truth is that you should do what's right for you. Every situation is unique. Only get a new pet if/when the time is right for everyone involved. The hardest part about having a pet is losing him/her, and when your pets are grieving too it can be even more difficult.

Your home is a big investment. Protect it.

RESPECTING PATTERNS IN SCRIPTURE

By Nathan Combs

Logically, exceptions to a pattern do not invalidate an entire pattern. Exceptions (in the sense of cases which don't follow norms) are merely exceptions. We understand how this works in secular life. According to our national Constitution (article two, section two), the President has the power to grant pardons for crimes committed "against the United States." If a newly-arrived immigrant picks up a newspaper and reads about how the President completely absolved a group of people for their offenses, is he correct to assume that our entire criminal justice system works in this way? Is every criminal pardoned by our president? It's obvious that presidential pardons are rare exceptions to the pattern of our national criminal justice system, not the pattern itself.

Let's begin to apply this logic to Scriptural ideas. If you read 2 Kings 2, you'll find an account of a man who goes straight to heaven without experiencing death. In that text, the prophet Elijah crosses the Jordan River in the company of Elisha (his protege and successor), has a brief conversation, and then is carried off by char-lots of fire and enters heaven in a whirlwind. By looking at this one passage, can I assume that the Bible teaches that mankind does not die before reaching God? Obviously not! The broader context of Scripture clearly teaches us a pattern that our own life experience corroborates: our bodies age, lose their strength, and die. Elijah is indeed an exception to this pattern of death, but the pattern remains nonetheless.

With this foundation laid, hopefully we can see more controversial Bible subjects more clearly, like water baptism for the forgiveness of sins. In discussions amongst Bible students, the following argument is sometimes made: "What about the man who hears the gospel but does not have access to water? Is he saved?" First of all, water covers approximately 71% of our planet's surface, it is piped and channeled into countless other locations, and its regular consumption is necessary to sustain human life. Therefore, a man who cannot find enough water to immerse his body is truly in an "exceptional" situation! Fortunately, how Jesus will judge such a man is not my decision to make. Since Jesus promises that those who seek Him will find Him (Matthew 7.7-8), I'm confident that God will help those who want to obey His call to be saved. But even if such a hypothetical exception exists, it in no way negates the overarching Scriptural pattern of salvation through water or the specific teachings of King Jesus' apostles.

We must respect patterns of thought in the Scriptures. The future of our eternal lives depends on honestly interpreting the words which God has written down "for our instruction" (Romans 15.4).
Will we make the Bible fit into our own historical and cultural notions of what is right, or will we allow God the liberty to speak truth to our hearts? The choice is ours.

Catholic Morality is not about right and wrong action; rather, it is about a particular relationship and the world view of that relationship. The relationship we are speaking of is one with Jesus Christ, He in whom we are called to center our very lives. This relationship creates a world view which should inform and form every word we speak, every action we take and every decision we make. Catholic Morality can only be lived out when we understand that relationship, what it means to us, and the world view it creates.
